So much can be said to the necessity of mentoring programs and other similar activities for our youth. I believe giving young people a vested interest in their community is the only path to building a strong future for our region. Considering the rapidity at which schools are consolidating, we need after-school programs that not only focus on giving young people a safe place to do homework, play sports, or worship religiously, but a place that will encourage teens to take stock in themselves (their art, abilities, etc.) and motivate young people to play an active role, be it civic, volunteer, or other, in their communities. This will surely build stronger character on the individual level, and equally importantly on the whole, build a more self-reliant generation for the greater good for all of our communities. |

| 1 | 0.49% | Relating to questions 8 & 10. While service industry / retail jobs are often available in our area, jobs that give individuals a greater sense of self-importance and worth are sorely lacking. Jobs that provide on-site training are desperately needed to instill positive work ethics and passion in our labor force, as well as higher wages. Attention must also be paid to our available workforce. Letcher county, for example, is missing a vital demographic - folks in their late teens to early thirties. Many of these individuals have moved out of the region for post-secondary education and more thriving job markets. If we could somehow make southeastern Kentucky a fiscally advantageous region in which to raise a family, money would begin flowing through the area more freely, thus giving local governments greater tax revenues for employment programs and local businesses incentive to hire greater numbers of individuals in our area, not to mention interpersonal and small-business gains. |
